Robert Kwong provides counsel to public and private entities on environment and land use law. Robert's experience includes counseling on various contractual and transactional matters. His work focuses on California land use planning, zoning and permitting laws and regulations, the California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA), National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA), the Ralph M. Brown Act open meetings law, California Political Reform Act and Public Records Act matters, California Coastal Act, and federal and California Clean Air Acts. He also advises on many controversial land-use issues such as solid waste landfill issues and water issues.

Prior to joining Nossaman, he served as counsel to various public agencies where he handled matters concerning environmental health and climate change laws and regulations.
